In receiving this award, Grayton Plumbing distinguished itself as one of the top plumbing companies in all of PSI and North America.

"Grayton Plumbing met every single criteria desired for our Training Company of the Year. They instruct their employees on how to deliver superior customer service, take complete advantage of the most state-of-the-art technology available, and give back to their customers and community in many different ways," Mike Diamond, CEO of PSI, said. "With that in mind, Grayton Plumbing stood out among the thousands of plumbing contractors in North America as the best. The Washington D.C. and surrounding areas are fortunate to have a visionary business owner like Frankey Grayton serving its people."

This immense recognition deservingly acknowledges Grayton Plumbing's tireless effort and relentless desire to become a successful business. Their hard work has created a positive atmosphere and sentiment that has rippled throughout the company and city in which they serve. With this honor, their hours of hard work, training, and program implementation have been validated and justly venerated.

For their achievement, Grayton Plumbing received a trophy recognizing their accomplishments as well as a ceremony distinguishing their exemplary work during the Orlando Expo.

"This is a tremendous honor," Frankey Grayton, owner of Grayton Plumbing, said. "Not only is this a tribute to the company, it's a tribute to everyone on our team. They've all worked so hard to get where we are today. Their willingness to learn and contribute to the greater good inspires me each and every day."

Grayton Plumbing is an exclusive member of PSI – an elite group that represents the top one-percent of all residential plumbing contractors in North America.
